Customer sent the following -

TEP is attempting to radically change the way that solar customers are paid for excess electricity they send to the grid after meeting their own requirements.

This matter should not be heard at all now as an independent matter. Rather it should be a part of a rate case, where all possible inter-class "subsidies" are examined.

Alternatively, this matter should be a part of a generic rulemaking proceeding regarding net metering so there is a consistent statewide approach. That is the way that the present net metering rules were adopted and is the correct manner in which to proceed, especially since the Commission now has before it proposals to change net metering tariffs from TEP, Trico, APS and Sulfur Springs Electric Coop, each of which proposes a different repayment plan. The Commission should establish a reasonable hearing schedule, provide the opportunity for submission of evidence and cross examination and determine if the current net metering rules should be modified.

Customer sent the following -

I am a concerned citizen who has done the right thing by installing solar panels on my Tucson Home. I live in a community called Civano and I am here because of my energy consciousness.

TEP has recently proposed a revision to the current net metering rules. This proposal will reduce the value of excess generation for new customers, and eventually current customers. This is obviously a bad thing for solar and non solar customers

I wanted to emphasize that I want the freedom to obtain my energy from the sun AND from a utility company. Your actions will eventually lead me to move off the grid to a battery solution. Is that your intention?

When I moved to Arizona I could not understand why new homes are not required to have solar energy. Now the commission is in a position to take away a key incentive to purchase it. Please consider the future of Arizona and not just the TEP short term gain on a balance sheet. Backward thinking is not progress.

Do the right thing and make AZ proud.
